Veteran officer charged with false imprisonment

A year later. Officer Kevin Corcoran allegedly cuffed a man without cause last March.

A year after an alleged incident near 13th and Lombard streets, a Philadelphia police officer has been charged with false imprisonment for allegedly cuffing an Iraq war veteran without cause, before releasing the man 15 minutes later.

Kevin Corcoran, 33, has been an officer for nearly a decade and is assigned to the 17th District.

According to prosecutors, he allegedly was on duty and driving by a group of people around 2 a.m. on March 31, 2013, when he got out of the car and confronted the group.

Prosecutors don't say why Corcoran exited his car, but state that after members of the group told Corcoran that he had made an illegal U-turn, he got out of the vehicle and started "yelling at the group."

One individual who was filming Corcoran with a cellphone allegedly had his phone slapped out of his hand, then Corcoran allegedly pushed the man, grabbed him by the chest, handcuffed him and placed him in the police vehicle.

This incident was reportedly filmed by other members of the group, prosecutors said.

Corcoran allegedly drove off with the individual and told him that he was arresting him for public intoxication, but when the individual in question told Corcoran he was a veteran of the Iraq war, Corcoran returned the individual to 13th and Rodman streets, uncuffed him and let him out of the vehicle, according to prosecutors.

Corcoran turned himself in Wednesday morning.

Police Commissioner Charles Ramsey has reportedly ordered Corcoran suspended for 30 days with intent to dismiss, police said.

Not the first time?

In 2010, City Paper ran a first-person account by writer Andrew Thompson.

- It said he saw Corcoran punch a drunk man in the face, hit him with a baton and throw him into a garbage can, all in 2008 on the day that the city was celebrating the Phillies' World Series win.
- According to the report, a complaint filed against Corcoran over the incident with Internal Affairs was dismissed.

Change. City announces plan to modify ICE hold policy at hearing

Immigrants and their supporters rallied at City Hall during their hearing on Wednesday. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

At a hearing Wednesday on the city's partnership with federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement, deputy mayor of public safety Richard Negrin said that Mayor Michael Nutter will soon sign an executive order telling police and prisons not to honor ICE detainers except for in cases of first- and second-degree felonies or when ICE has a warrant for that person.

Currently, if Philadelphia police make an arrest, individuals with questionable citizenship status will be referred to ICE. Police can hold that individual until ICE can review the case. In some cases, this leads to deportation. Advocates for immigrants rights and civil rights attorneys say the practice is problematic constitutionally.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit recently ruled that ICE detainers are technically just requests, and not mandatory.

Meanwhile, cities such as Chicago, Newark and Washington, D.C., have chosen to opt out of cooperation between local law enforcement and ICE.

"ICE has implemented clear priorities that focus on convicted criminals and other public safety threats, on those who repeatedly violate our immigration laws," said ICE spokeswoman Nicole Navas in an email.

Jury deadlocks in priest sex abuse case

McCormick / PPD

The jury hearing the case of Andrew McCormick, a Catholic priest accused of sexually abusing a 10-year-old boy in 1997 at St. John Cantius parish in Bridesburg, said they were hopelessly deadlocked and could not reach a verdict Wednesday.

Prosecutors immediately stated their intentions to retry McCormick.

McCormick was arrested in July 2012 after the alleged victim came forward. He was previously suspended in May 2011 along with 20 other priests after a grand jury report said priests accused of abuse were still in the ministry.

"The Archdiocese was not involved in Father McCormick's legal defense and did not underwrite its costs," said spokesman Ken Gavin. "Father McCormick will remain on administrative leave with all current restrictions in place at this time." METRO

Man vandalizes Chinatown police station

A man allegedly went berserk at a Chinatown police precinct building overnight Wednesday, using a baseball bat to smash the windows to more than a dozen police vehicles outside the department's Sixth District building.

He vandalized 14 police vehicles and smashed several windows to the building.

Police say the suspect, who reportedly was only wearing boxers and boots, was screaming he was dead rapper Tupac Shakur. METRO

Tetris next game for Cira Centre facade

See more at www.metro.us

Game time. A game of Tetris will kick off the fourth annual Philly Tech Week.

To heck with Pong. Let's play Tetris.

As a prelude to Philly Tech Week, Drexel University's Frank Lee will again adapt an arcade game to fit on the facade of the 29-story Cira Centre in University City. But unlike last year, this game will use both sides of the skyscraper.

Lee, a co-founder of Drexel's game design program, said the idea to play a video game on a skyscraper began with Tetris.

"The idea," he said, "came when I was driving on I-76. It was toward the evening, I saw the sparking lights of the Cira Centre, and in my mind's eye, I saw Tetris shapes."

It was Pong, however, that was the first classic video game conformed to the unique LED-lighted surface of the dark-colored structure. And it set a Guinness World Record for the "Largest Architectural Video Game Display."

This year, for each Tetris matchup, one player will be situated at Eakins Oval and an opponent will be set at a yet-to-be-identified spot on Drexel's campus.

Last year's game "utilized 460 light-emitting diodes affixed to the Centre's shadowbox spandrels" and occupying a playing area of 59,800 square feet, according to a news release.

This year's game would double the square footage, and theoretically, set a new world record.

Overall, the idea wasn't just to make a big game of Tetris, but to shake off a generation-wide technological isolation: to tear out earphones and pull heads away from lit screens.

"This was my effort to bring back a shared moment," he said.

Comcast in the crosshairs

Yeah, Cira Centre is cool. But they can go bigger. Frank Lee said he is in talks with Comcast about bringing the "War of the Worlds" game to the sparkling, USB drive-shaped skyscraper on JFK Boulevard.

"I sort of pitched an idea, and they liked it," he said.

The idea was to use the digital HD display inside the tower's lobby as part of a citywide recreation of "War of the Worlds."

"But we left it at that," he said. "And that's something that I may pursue with them."

Derailed. 25th Street Bridge safety issues addressed at hearing

The recent partial derailment of seven CSX freight cars carrying crude oil over the Schuylkill River, despite no spill occurring, compelled City Councilman Kenyatta Johnson to convene a hearing Wednesday on the incident.

"We're trying to avoid a catastrophe," Johnson said. "I keep hearing as long as the train is safe to go back and forth to transport product for clients, everything's okay. ... The people in the neighborhood are still living under siege."

CSX vice president for community affairs Quintin Kendall explained that maintenance to upgrade the bridge by replacing cross-ties over a several-week period led to the incident.

The crew performing the upgrade did not follow proper protocol for anchoring temporary fasteners to the new ties, which is believed to be the cause of the derailment.

No oil was leaked, but removing the partially toppled train cars took a full week.

CSX has hired a local contractor currently working on loose concrete issues on the 25th Street Bridge. SAM NEWHOUSE

Satellite. Image may show debris from Malaysian airplane

A Chinese satellite hunting for the missing Malaysian Airline jetliner found three floating objects at sea along the plane's intended route, the government said.

Images from the Gaofen-1 showed the pieces were as large as 24 meters by 22 meters, the State Administration of Science, Technology and Industry for National Defense said on its website. The pictures were snapped on March 9, the day after Flight 370 vanished while flying to Beijing from Kuala Lumpur.

China's report placed the location near the confluence of the South China Sea and Gulf of Thailand. BLOOMBERG

Obama to boost number of workers eligible for overtime

President Barack Obama will seek to increase the number of people eligible to earn overtime pay by updating regulations that exempt many supervisors, managers and office workers from getting paid for working extra hours, a White House official said on Wednesday.

Obama will ask the Labor Department today to look at regulations governing overtime, and whether to hike the salary threshold above which employers are not required to pay overtime. REUTERS

Two New York buildings collapsed Wednesday in an explosion believed to have been caused by a gas leak, killing three people, injuring at least 36 and setting off a search for more victims feared trapped in the debris, officials said. As of press time Wednesday evening, the search was ongoing.

The blast, which scattered debris onto nearby rooftops, brought down neighboring five-story buildings with a total of 15 apartments at about 9:30 a.m. on the largely residential block at East 116th Street and Park Avenue.

Quoted

"All of a sudden the whole building shook. We had no idea what was going on."

Robert Pauline
Columbia University data processor whose apartment six blocks away was rocked by the explosion

Clouds of smoke billowed from the rubble of the buildings that sat above a ground-level church and a piano store in a majority Latino working-class neighborhood. Officials declined to give a number of people still missing.

Mayor Bill de Blasio, who rushed to the scene, where a cascade of twisted and burnt metal blocked the sidewalk and covered parked cars, said preliminary information showed the explosion was caused by a gas leak.

Officials said the blast occurred 15 minutes after a resident in an adjacent building called to complain of a gas odor. REUTERS

Sandusky's wife claims that he is innocent, victims manipulated

Child sexual abuse. The case shattered Penn State's storied football program.

The wife of convicted child molester and former Penn State assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky said on Wednesday that he was innocent and that the victims who testified against him were manipulated for money.

In her first television interview on the subject, Dottie Sandusky said on NBC's "Today" show that she believed her husband's contention that he had never molested boys, including incidents in their home in State College, Pa.

Jerry Sandusky, 70, a former defensive coordinator at Pennsylvania State University, was convicted of 45 counts of child sex abuse. He was sentenced to 30 to 60 years in prison for abusing 10 boys over the course of 15 years, including on campus.

"I think they were manipulated. Once lawyers came into the case, they said there was money," she said of the victims who testified in the 2012 trial.

Pension revoked

$4.9K

The former coach's $4,900-a-month pension was revoked when he was sentenced. The decision also ended benefits for his wife, and Jerry Sandusky is trying to have the pension restored.

Asked about newspaper commentators' contention that she was complicit in the abuse, Sandusky said, "I'm not a weak spouse.

"As you know, they called me 'Sarge' because Jerry said I kept everybody in line. If they want to say that, let them say that."

Penn State said in October it had paid $60 million to 26 men to settle the bulk of claims against it stemming from the scandal. They included one from the Sanduskys' adopted son, Matt. Sandusky told "Today" she believed her husband's contention that he was innocent.

"I definitely believe him because if I didn't believe him ... when I testified at trial I could not have said what I said. I would have had to tell the truth," she said.

Sandusky was joined in the interview by documentary filmmaker John Ziegler, who believes Jerry Sandusky is innocent and has interviewed him in prison. REUTERS

In Tokyo, lawsuit raised red flags on Mt. Gox funding, compliance

Two months before Mt. Gox filed for bankruptcy it was sued by a customer seeking the return of funds in a case that highlights some of the red flags raised in the run-up to the collapse of the bitcoin exchange.

New York resident Marko Simovic filed a civil action at the Tokyo District Court on Dec. 24, seeking to recover $105,000 he had on deposit at Mt. Gox and about $14,000 in interest, court filings show. REUTERS

Choosing the school is worth the time and effort put into researching the right choice. / COLOURBOX

Choosing

Getting in. What to look for when you start your search.

Transferring your child to a charter school can be a harrowing experience before his or her new classes even start. But a little research will light the way. Every charter school is different, which of course is the point, and because they are all independent, you won't find any kind of guide grouping them by focus or discipline. So we've collected a few resources to help you start your research.

What to look for

Once you've made a list of schools whose mission statements and educational focuses feel appropriate for your student, nothing beats showing up in person. "Parents should conduct visits, ask questions," explains Deirdre Darragh, of the School District of Philadelphia. Ask teachers if they've been happy there. Request information regarding the schools' performance numbers.

Perhaps most importantly, investigate how seasoned the teachers are. A 2003 National Assessment of Educational Progress study of charter school performance discovered that students whose teachers had five years or more of experience performed significantly better than those with inexperienced teachers, regardless of the school. It also determined that charter schools are twice as likely to employ inexperienced teachers as traditional public schools.

Getting in

By law, any applicant in a charter school's district may attend. Since the best schools typically have

Variety is the rule

A charter school education includes basic district school lessons, such as in reading and social studies, math and science, but typically has an additional, unique focus. Technology is popular, as are art, music and language immersion. Many schools explore a variety of alternative teaching methods, as well.

Charters also may have different or extended school hours, or occasionally, educate on the week-more applicants than spots, they accept students via lottery. But there are some loopholes — for example, siblings of current students frequently receive priority — so ask each school about the process. Also, when it comes to the application process, it's important to know your rights. There are examples of less scrupulous schools requiring essays or testing, or volunteer time from parents — none of which is legal — in an effort to select better-performing students and improve the school's chances of reaching it's charter-demanded performance numbers.

Another tip: attend board meetings. Although each school is categorized as a corporation, with its own board of trustees, it is still a public institution, and is required by law to make its board meetings open to the public.

According to Darragh, the single best thing you can do is, "Start early. Provide ample time for research and inquiry. Given that every charter school has its own deadline, it is crucial that families are aware of the expectations for application submission and compile a timeline for each application."

ends. Cyber schools, which were enacted with Act 88 of 2002, allow students to work remotely from computers for some if not all of their classes, and may have flexible schedules. All charter and cyber students are allowed to participate in the athletics programs and after-school clubs of Philadelphia schools.

Talking point

Swift gives Gomez the boot

Selena Gomez is reportedly learning the hard way that reuniting with Justin Bieber might cost her a friend or two, as Taylor Swift has started giving Gomez the cold shoulder recently, according to Us Weekly. But while Gomez's reunion with Bieber in Texas for the SXSW music festival this week is the last straw as far as Swift is concerned, her distrust of Gomez apparently started last June, when Gomez reportedly "used" Swift's pal Ed Sheeran to make Bieber jealous. "After Selena pulled that move, Taylor started distancing herself," a source says.

The Lindsay Lohan sex list

The men Lindsay Lohan has slept with are way more impressive than the people she's worked with.

In a "world exclusive," In Touch Weekly somehow got its hands on Lindsay Lohan's conquest list, and the names are a who's who of Hollywood elite. Some of the biggies? Heath Ledger, Adam Levine, Zac Efron, Justin Timberlake, Joaquin Phoenix, Colin Farrell, Evan Peters, Wilmer Valderrama and Jamie Dornan.

Apparently, Lohan worked on the list while drinking with friends at the Beverly Hills Hotel on Jan. 30, 2013. (I mean, who hasn't written down all of the famous stars they have slept with, amiright?) "It was her personal conquest list. She was trying to impress her friends with the list and then tossed it aside," a source tells the mag, which reprinted the handwritten list. The source notes that Lohan had to think about the names, "as if she had to remind herself of who they were."

However — and this is juicy — some of the names have been redacted for legal reasons, signaling that some of the men on the list could be married actors. Uh-oh.

True or not, this pleases me to no end. This list is the most interesting work of art Lohan has worked on in years.

Four-year-old Charley Ross was kidnapped in 1874. / JONATHAN BRIGHTON

Uncovering long-lost (ransom) letters

See more at www.metro.us

Infamous. New exhibit examines the nation's first kidnapping for ransom.

As Philadelphia author Carrie Hagen wrote in her 2011 book, "We Is Got Him: The Kidnapping That Changed America," Germantown boy Charley Ross was never found following his 1874 kidnapping. Miraculously, the long-lost ransom letters written by Charley's abductors to his parents have been — hidden among a trove of family artifacts in a Mt. Airy basement.

Last March, a school librarian was hunting through bins full of family memorabilia to find an old family drawing she wanted to print on the invitations to her daughter's bridal shower when she came across a stack of envelopes tied with a black shoelace. "She thought she was opening love letters that her grandmother had written to her grandfather," Hagen says. "It was definitely the old school 'treasure in the attic' story."

The texts of the letters had been printed in police files and in the memoirs of Christian Ross, Charley's father, so the discovery didn't add anything factual to the story told in Hagen's book. Nevertheless, seeing the letters in person did bring the kidnappers vividly to life. "Looking at them was odd," she says. "You can see the kidnappers' psychology unraveling as you read the content, but seeing them handwritten makes it so much more present. The handwriting, which is always awkward, is messier when they go off on crazy, ranting tangents."

How the letters wound up among this particular family's belongings is just one more mystery in a long string of mysteries associated with the case. Charley's fate remains unknown 140 years after his abduction, while his case — which became a gripping public and political story in the city as it readied itself for the Centennial Exposition — became infamous as the first known kidnapping for ransom in the country.

Slice of history

After a bidding war, the letters were auctioned late last year for $20,000 — the same amount originally demanded by the kidnappers. All 23 letters are now on view at the Germantown Historical Society, returning them to the scene of the crime. They'll be displayed alongside a number of objects and newspaper clippings related to the kidnapping. "I'm glad that they're ending up in Germantown and not being divided up," Hagen says of the letters. "They tell such a sad story that I wanted them to stay together."

SAOIRSE RONAN

A 'GRAND' OLD TIME

The star of Wes Anderson films is Wes Anderson. But what does that mean for the actors — the many acclaimed, terrific actors — who regularly act for him? The latest addition to the fold is Saoirse Ronan. In "The Grand Budapest Hotel," the teenage Oscar nominee (for "Atonement") handles the small but vital role of a bakery girl in a fictitious mid-European nation who gets caught up in zany but dangerous intrigue with a bellboy (Tony Revolori) and a concierge (Ralph Fiennes).

In person, Wes Anderson seems unexpectedly confident.
He's one of those guys who seems so shy, but he's very talkative and he's very relaxed. He's very classy, he's very elegant. He's a European American. A lot of time [while filming] he won't look at the monitor. If you're doing a dialogue scene, he'll sit next to the camera and watch the scene live. Which I really liked, I thought that was lovely.

He probably didn't have to twist your arm to accept the role.
He didn't have to persuade me to do it. "Yes, Wes Anderson, of course I'll do your film. Don't be ridiculous." I kept thanking him all the time for letting me be in the film.

How clear is the character on the page? How much can you bring to her yourself?
I just needed to follow his lead, really. You can't make any of his characters dull, because they're written so colorfully. He's already decided who they're going to be, and trusts you to bring that to life. I just needed to do what Wes asked, really. And I did. I think.

As an actor, do you like that?
I liked having that much clarity given to me. I liked knowing exactly what I had to do. There's a certain amount of control and energy you need to put into every single one of the takes. I suppose there is a bit of collaboration, but he knows what he wants. He doesn't ram it down your throat — he's just clear on what he wants. If you want to try something, he'll do it. But usually his way works better. [Laughs]

Beats working

Were there any other challenges? Your character does work in a pastry shop.
I had a little icing gun thing, and the [baker] said, "Yes, you just take this and you squirt it on and you do that." And of course every single one of [hers] was perfect. And I thought, "Oh, I can do that." I went to do it and it was just [motions that it was a mess]. It was the most difficult thing I've ever done on a film set. The stuff she made was beautiful. It was nice to eat it after.

'Need for Speed'

1 Can Aaron Paul survive after "Breaking Bad"? Is he even the same person without liberal use of profanities? Find out as he races across the country.

Aaron Paul has a need for speed — which is to say driving fast, not a drug that's not meth. / MELINDA SUE GORDON

2 'The Grand Budapest Hotel'
The latest Wes Anderson joint probably won't win over detractors, but that's their loss. The filmmaker goes so far as to create his own country, where a concierge (Ralph Fiennes) gets involved in some business after banging an octo-genarian dowager (Tilda Swinton).

3 'Tyler Perry's The Single Moms Club'
Has it already been three months since the last Tyler Perry film? This time he rounds up a diverse batch — Nia Long, Amy Smart, Cocoa Brown and Wendi McLendon-Covey — to bond. There's also the great Terry Crews.

4 'Stranger by the Lake'
Many flocked to "Blue is the Warmest Color" because it featured young French lesbians. Will they turn out in equal size to its gay dude semi-equivalent? Filmmaker Alain Guiraudie hangs out at a cruising site where the usually graphic sex is upset by a murder.

5 'Veronica Mars'
You paid for this movie to happen, now pay again to see it. Funded in part by Kickstarter, the junior sleuth show finds its hero (Kristen Bell) lured back to Neptune, Calif., when her old boyfriend is accused of murder.

6 '300: Rise of an Empire'
Zack Snyder's homophobic yet homoerotic Spartan bloodbath gets a belated sequel, or a rather side-sequel. The less chronicled Battle of Artemisium is the focus this time, and best of all there's Eva Green as a warrior queen who likes to make out with freshly decapitated heads.

Weight Loss Research Study

Right now, doctors in Philadelphia are accepting participants for a new weight loss research study. If you are overweight and between the ages of 21 - 65, you may qualify to participate. The study is for a reversible, minimally-invasive investigational weight loss procedure designed to reduce the calories absorbed after a meal. The study also includes a comprehensive weight loss support program.

There is no cost to participate, and study-related care will be overseen by a team of weight loss specialists.

Fellowship of the ring

Toward the end of the conversation, a girl approaches with a question.

"Have you guys seen a ring that looks just like this," she asks, holding up her finger. After a moment she finds the ring that had fallen off when she had been sitting there. She says thank you and exits.

Wayman giggles as she reveals that the girl who had lost the ring is the singer she's most excited to hear play SXSW. "That's BANKS!"

"She was really upset and cute," says Kokal. "That song is amazing."

When the members of Warpaint sit down in the lobby cafe of the Omni Hotel in Austin, Texas, half of them order beers. It's a quarter past noon. But this anecdote is a little misleading; the band are taking it easy compared to the SXSW Music Conference in 2011, when they played 13 shows in four days.

"When you start touring and you start playing festivals, you realize, 'Oh my God, we're going to meet all of these artists that we love and we're actually contemporaries and part of this whole movement,'" says Theresa Wayman, who sings and plays guitar for the band.

"It's kind of debaucherous," adds Emily Kokal, who sings and plays guitar too. "We don't have any rules. It's just what feels good. We've gotten better at listening to ourselves and figuring out what we want."

Warpaint are only playing six SXSW shows this year, giving themselves a break, and they all seem eager to take in sets by some of those contemporaries and new performers.

Wayman mentions the R&B singer BANKS.

"There's this one song that is really amazing," she says. "It's called, 'This Is What It Feels Like.'"

She produces her phone and plays the song for her bandmates. The conversation turns to En Vogue, the '90s vocal group who Wayman says she used to watch video footage of as a kid. Although the influence is not immediately apparent on Warpaint's self-titled second album, it makes sense. On most of the songs, the vocal notes are drawn out in such a way that it's easy to forget that they're words and not just sounds, and the wispy harmonies float above as instruments drive and dirge like classic alternative rock. Basically the sound is somewhere between En Vogue and The Cure.

"Soul is embedded in all of us," says Kokal, "just like a lot of different musical stylings, but it's not illuminated that we all like to dance. That's something that ties us all together."

Jump on the F/W '14 trends now

Fashion. Satisfy your wants and wishes for next season's styles with trends you can start wearing early.

It's a familiar cycle: Christmas and New Year's Eve come and go, and we pull ourselves through January by splurging on brand-new clothes for spring. But by the time March arrives, we don't want our expensive new spring garb anymore and are coveting next season's trends instead.

It's a cruel aspect of the fashion industry. Despite spring/summer '14 not even technically having arrived yet, pastel pinks are feeling old hat and we're already craving next season's Marni fur coats, Burberry blankets and '60s mini-dresses a la Versace instead.

Your March rent money may have already been spent on everything floral, sporty and slider-ish. So you don't waste your next paycheck too, we're helping to satisfy your craving for trendy new clothes with a run-through of next season's must-haves that you can totally jump on early.

These highlights all guarantee two seasons' worth of wearing pleasure for the price of one.

1 Swinging '60s

Versace was the one that took the idea most literally, but designers across all four cities showed the Swinging '60s some love. Prepare to hike your hemline: Mini-dresses are in.

2 High-class marketing

We're talking about Moschino. Making the logos of McDonald's, Froot Loops and SpongeBob SquarePants en vogue, Jeremy Scott single-handedly made commercialism cool again. To jump on the trend early, find the brashest slogan on the shelf and purchase immediately.

3 Royal blue

Royal blue is set to be one of the defining shades of fall/winter '14, with the likes of Topshop Unique, Proenza Schouler and Roksanda Ilincic all embracing it. We know for a fact it's a color that looks great with a tan, so why wait until winter?

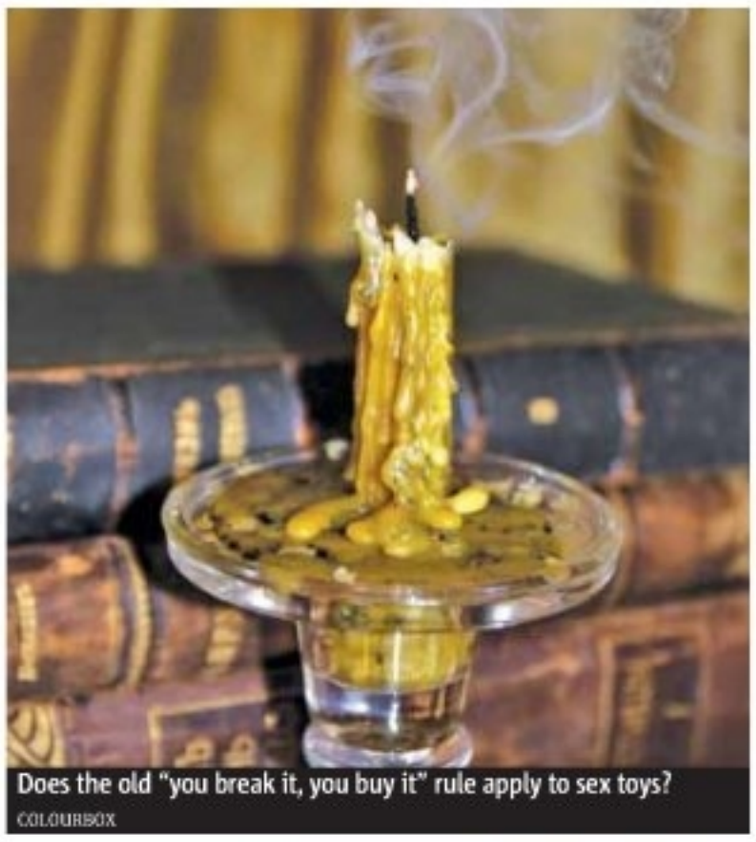
HOW SAFE IS A DAMAGED DILDO?

I've got a quick question and it's kinda weird. My girlfriend has had a dildo for some time and, recently, she has grown quite fond of it. That is until three days ago, when the damn thing caught on fire next to her dresser while she was in the shower. (I knocked the dresser not knowing there was a lit candle next to it.) Is the dildo still safe to use? I managed to get all the wax off, but it still has some burns on it and it smells like burnt rubber. Is it toxic to use internally?



Does the old "you break it, you buy it" rule apply to sex toys?

COLOURBOX

Are you serious?! Sir, you are the reason I love writing this column. As anyone who's ever signed up for Tinder, OkCupid, Match.com, JDate or any other dating site can attest, anything is possible — and, thanks to the Internet, we can all find out about it. I appreciate your sharing.

I'll take you at your word and assume that the situation above actually occurred. Worst case scenario, you've given everyone a laugh, something we can all appreciate. Best case scenario, you truly need advice, and my tips will serve to improve your sex life and also aid others in similar situations. Either way, thank you.

Read my advice

Published in print and online every other Thursday, I answer questions from Metro readers to provide the public with useful, important sexual health information to improve your relationships. This education is meant be to be additive: The more you read, the more you know. To get a sex toy safety primer, check out my previous column, "Are your sex toys safe? We ask an expert" on Metro's website. It's a great starting point.

Remember your health

It sounds simple, but it's really a revolutionary idea: Sexual health is, indeed, part of your overall well-being. Educators teach the subject in classrooms, online and with columns like mine to prevent sickness, injury and death. Please know that plastics contains all kinds of compounds, some of them toxic. When burned, these substances not only break apart and attach to the product's surface, they can also release into the air as harmful gases such as carbon monoxide and hydrogen cyanide. This may be painful to hear, but trust me on this one: Throw. The toy. Away.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author.

Replace and save face

Buy your girlfriend a new toy

You mentioned she was "quite fond" of her toy. Given that dildos can measure up to 18 inches in length and have the girth of Arnold Schwarzenegger's forearm, this item was probably pretty special to your lady. Since you're the one who destroyed it, you owe her a replacement. Either buy the same model you ruined or branch out and purchase a new product that meets her unique style, interests and preferred sexual activities. The romantic shopping possibilities are endless. Treat your gift like any other present: Wrap it, and don't forget a card and the bow! She'll appreciate the extra effort. The thought always counts.

WRAP IT UP.

Don your finest green attire and head to McGillin's. / PROVIDED

Feeling green with jealousy because you have to work this Monday? Well, there's no reason you can't feel the lush of the Irish this weekend instead. Philly celebrates the 17th throughout March, so grab a pint at one of these pre-Patrick's Day parties. Sláinte!

McGillin's Olde Ale House

1310 Drury St., 215-735-5562
Considering how quickly bars come and go in Philadelphia, it's impressive that McGillin's has been serving beer since 1860. Their rotating Irish food specials, stouts and cocktails make this the place to be to get your Irish on. Let's not forget that they'll be serving green beer and Irish coffee this weekend in honor of the St. Patrick's Day parade.

The Bards Irish Bar

2013 Walnut St., 215-569-9585
Irish owned and operated since opening in 1995, it's pretty much St. Patrick's Day every day of the year at The Bards. This Saturday they'll continue the celebration with Killian's Irish Red and Tullamore Dew drink specials.

Con Murphy's

1700 Ben Franklin Pkwy., 267-687-1128
Proclaiming to have the "best pint of Guinness in Philly," you can expect just that at Con Murphy's. Special Guinness promotional offers will be going down all day Saturday. You can count on catching all the English Premiere League action there, as well.

McFadden's

461 N. Third St., 215-928-0630
Everyone enjoys a good Kegs & Eggs party every now and again! McFadden's will open their doors at 9 a.m. Saturday, with a show by Lost In Paris 3-6 p.m.

Piazza at Schmidts

1001 N. Second St., 215-825-7552
There's almost always a party going on at the Piazza at Schmidts, and this Saturday is no different. All the bars in the Piazza — including Crabby Cafe & Sports Bar, King Oaks Lane, PYT, Darlings Diner and Gunner's Run — will be participating in the St. Patrick's Day Bar Crawl, with drink specials and live entertainment. The 400-square-foot LED screen will play a live Instagram feed of photos tagged with #StPattysPiazza.

Here's hoping for some warm weather for the Piazza's bar crawl. PROVIDED

O'Neals Pub

611 S. Third St., 215-574-9495
Feed your inner Irishman with authentic corned beef and cabbage at O'Neals Irish Pub. Their pre-St. Patrick's Parade party on Saturday will also feature other Irish favorites along with assorted drink specials throughout the day.

Fado

1500 Locust St., 215-893-9700
If you really need to get your Irish fix before everywhere else opens, look no further than Fado. Their doors open at 7 a.m. for European sports, English Premier League and Six Nations Rugby. If you can survive that, they'll be airing the Philadelphia Union home opener at 4 p.m. as well.

Sláinte Irish Pub & Grill

3000 Market St., 215-222-7400
Many bars in Philadelphia claim to be authentic Irish, but not all have arched ceilings and wood furnishings built in Waterford, Ireland. Aside from the accurate ambiance, they carry the Setanta Sports channel for all your rugby and soccer needs.

'Adding a touch of Indian flare'

Saag paneer. Rakesh Ramola offers creative cuisine at two Indeblue locations.

Ramola says Indeblue in South Jersey caters to a casual crowd of regulars, while the Center City location is fancier. / PROVIDED

Chef Rakesh Ramola picked up his cooking skills both in India and the U.S. He brings bright, traditional Indian dishes to Indeblue, which has locations in Midtown Village (205 S. 13th St., 215-545-4633) and across the bridge in Collingswood (619 Collings Ave., 856-854-4633). But he also turns tradition on its side with some unexpected flavors. We spoke with Ramola about juggling two similar but unique restaurants.

Where does the name Indeblue come from?
My wife Heather and I were looking for a name that hinted at the type of cuisine we wanted to serve — traditional and modern Indian. Coming up with the name was a family collaboration. Our original Indeblue location in Collingswood was painted bright blue by the previous tenant. After seeing the space, our oldest daughter came up with "India Blue," which eventually turned into Indeblue.

How does the Collingswood location differ in feel from the Midtown Village location?
Our Collingswood location is more casual dining — we know many of our regular guests by name. Here we offer a monthly special menu, which is exciting to create for our guests because I'm able to experiment by using unique and exotic ingredients not commonly found on our regular menus. Our Midtown Village location is more elegant, with a modern decor that fits well in the vibrant neighborhood. For our brunch menu, we feature traditional breakfast and lunch dishes that I remember my mother making for me when I was growing up in India. I enjoy taking traditional brunch items and adding a touch of Indian flare.

Do you work at both locations?
I make sure I'm in the kitchen of both locations at some point every day. Early mornings are spent in Collingswood assisting my chefs in preparation and ensuring quality and consistency. During the evenings I divide my time between both restaurants depending on customer volume, events or caterings.

Do you have a favorite bar or restaurant near you?
Heather and I really enjoy Zeppoli, which is located across the street from Indeblue in Collingswood. Joey [Baldino] is a great guy and his food is delicious.

Date rape is still rape

Re: 'Is the only way to "Marry Smart"?' (Metro, March 11) As a psychotherapist who has had the opportunity and privilege to do trauma work with rape survivors for the past 30 years, I was saddened and upset to read the quotes in Susan Patton's interview about her views on date rape.
Unfortunately, she is totally mistaken about what constitutes rape, and I believe that she has inadvertently triggered traumatic responses in readers by belittling this crime. Many rape survivors suffer from post-traumatic stress disorder. He foolish comments uttered so blithely further exacerbate the enormous wound that rape survivors suffer. US should put out its own fires

I read several articles about the Russian invasion of Crimea. But when I tried to discuss them with my Russian friends here, most of them expressed hostility toward U.S. involvement. Their main idea is: We have a lot of our own problems here, economic, financial, etc. Why do we need to help others, while forgetting the American people? Minimum wage, Social Security and other benefits are being cut, and skyrocketing prices are increasing.

Flyers play with very little room for error

NHL. Tuesday's loss to New Jersey puts the Flyers on the cusp of missing the playoffs again.

Steve Mason continues to be a strength for the Flyers. He had 29 saves Tuesday. / GETTY IMAGES

If the Flyers miss the playoffs by one point, look at Tuesday night's 2-1 loss to the Devils as a possible reason why.

It wasn't entirely the Flyers fault, though.

They may have lost the game 2-1 and missed out on six power play opportunities, but with under a minute left, a "no goal," that looked like it would send the game to overtime and award the Flyers a point in the standings was as grey as a call can be in professional sports.

"It's frustrating," Flyers captain Claude Giroux said after the loss. "We worked real hard to try and get that tying goal and it was a nice play by Kimmo [Timonen] to get it over to Jake [Voracek] and Jake gave a nice pass to [Scott Hartnell]. It's frustrating."

When replays were shown at the Wells Fargo Center over the Jumbotron, there was no question the puck crossed the plane, into the goal. But with Hartnell's body hitting goalie Martin Brodeur's seemingly at the exact same time, the play on the ice was deemed not reviewable.

"When the buzzer went off I was 100 percent sure it was going to be a goal," an angry Voracek said. "The playoffs are on the line."

If the postseason started today, the Flyers would barely make the cut as the second wildcard spot and No. 8 seed.

Just days ago, the Flyers were second in the Metropolitan Division and in the No. 4 spot. But the conference is jampacked. The Flyers' 73 points equals the total of Columbus and is just one less than the Rangers. They also lead the Devils by just two points.

Things are tight. And with two straight games against the Penguins on the docket, there isn't much room for error.

"What if, what ifs, a lot of what ifs," Hartnell said.

With every game increasing in importance by a magnitude as the stretch run gets more intense, Philadelphia will not face a team outside of the playoff picture until they play Buffalo on April 6, 12 games from now.

Oh yeah, they also face teams in first place in their respective division seven times in 17 games (Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Boston).

Flyers facts

The next 30 days will determine if the Flyers can be a Cup contender.

- The Flyers are in the midst of three straight days off. They will not have three consecutive days of rest again.
- With his assist on Nicklas Grossmann's goal Tuesday, Jakub Voracek now has eight points in the last four games.
- Scott Hartnell played his 500th game as a Flyer Tuesday, putting him 30th all-time.
- The Flyers will play 10 of their final 17 games at home.

Hamels happy

Hamels throws again

For the first time in 12 days, Cole Hamels threw a bullpen session in Clearwater. Though he threw just 20 pitches, Hamels said he was feeling "really great," after a few days of therapy and rest. Hamels and pitching coach Bob McClure refused to put a timetable on his return. He will throw another bullpen session soon.

NHL power rankings | by Rich Slate

No. 1

Blues (44-14-7)

As predicted, the Blues are even better with Ryan Miller in net. The Western Conference is stacked, but at the moment, the Blues are two points ahead of Anaheim for first place. St. Louis' goal differential is an NHL-best plus-65, which is close to insane. The Blues are 7-2-1 in their last 10 games and are 4-1 since they acquired Miller from the Sabres.

No. 2

Ducks (43-15-7)

When you are 4-4-2 in your last 10 games and three points behind St. Louis after playing the same amount of games, you get bumped down.

No. 3

Penguins (44-17-4)

For one night (Sunday), the Bruins were a point ahead of the Penguins. Since then, Pittsburgh swept a back-to-back with Washington.

No. 4

Bruins (42-17-5)

The B's won their previous five games heading into Wednesday night and have all but wrapped up the Atlantic.

No. 5

'Hawks (38-13-14)

They have scored an NHL-best 223 goals and they are 6-3-1 in their last 10 games. Just biding time until the playoffs.

No. 6

Avalanche (42-18-5)

The Avalanche will probably finish third in the Central, but it's not crazy to think they could reach the Cup Final this June.

No. 7

Sharks (39-17-7)

Tuesday night's 6-2 whitewashing of Toronto was the perfect send-off for their three-game road trip against East teams.

No. 8

Kings (38-22-6)

When you have won your last eight games it's easy to forget weaknesses (goal-scoring). The Kings have a five-game homestand starting Thursday.

No. 9

Wild (34-22-9)

The Wild seem to be the Atlanta Hawks of the NHL; they are good enough to make the playoffs but unable to make noise.

No. 10

Canadiens (34-24-7)

Canada's gold medal in Sochi seemed to come at a major cost for the Canadiens: Carey Price hasn't played since.

No. 11

Leafs (35-24-8)

Tuesday night's beating in San Jose notwithstanding, the Leafs are playing well. They just need to improve on the road.

No. 12

Lightning (34-24-7)

Steven Stamkos has understandably been rusty, but that's no excuse for his teammates. Tampa Bay is 2-6-2 in its last 10 games.

No. 13

Stars (32-23-10)

The Stars emotionally bounced back with a thrilling, 3-2, overtime win over St. Louis — a day after Rich Peverley collapsed.

Birds add champion

Eagles sign two more players to free-agent deals

The Eagles focused on special teams Wednesday, signing two impact players who are known for their contributions on kickoffs, punts and field goals.

Philly inked Chris Maragos and Bryan Braman to deals on the second day of NFL free agency.

Technically a safety, Maragos joins Philadelphia from the Super Bowl-champion Seahawks with a three-year, $4 million contract. According to a league source, the Birds outbid the Redskins for the 27-year-old hard hitter.

In his career, Maragos has played in 43 NFL games, including all 16 last season where he also played on 53 defensive snaps. His signing likely spells the end of the road for Kurt Coleman and Colt Anderson with Philadelphia.

The next time Chris Maragos plays at MetLife Stadium, it will be against the Giants as a member of the Eagles. / GETTY IMAGES

Braman comes to the Eagles from the Texans boasting size — he is 6-foot-5 and 241 pounds — and has the potential to fill in at a linebacker spot. His deal is worth $3.15 million over two years with $1 million guaranteed.

The Eagles still have a few areas to address with regards to free agent acquisitions. The Buccaneers officially let go of cornerback Darrelle Revis and ESPN reports that the Eagles are one of a handful of interested parties.

MLB. Phillies blast four triples, Burnett shows improvement

Domonic Brown hit a bases-clearing triple in the first inning to help the Phillies beat the Orioles Wednesday. / GETTY IMAGES

The Phillies got their third win of the spring with the excitement and solid pitching that fans have been waiting for in a 6-5 win over the Orioles Wednesday.

A.J. Burnett made his third start of the preseason and went four-plus frames, working out of several jams and allowing three runs, two of them on a Nolan Reimold homer in the fifth.

"I'm getting there," Burnett told reporters. "My timing is still a little off. I did strike out a guy with my curveball today; I was going to throw a party."

Burnett lowered his high ERA to 10.00, but he has gotten better each time he has taken the mound as a Phillie.

"The next time out I'm going to be stronger," he said.

The offense gave manager Ryne Sandberg a sigh of relief, as Phillies batters collected 12 hits — six of them for extra bases, and three of those scoring runs with two outs.

Bobby Abreu hit a double and a triple, and Domonic Brown hit a triple and drove in three runs.

Freddy Galvis and Ben Revere also had triples, with Chase Utley and Ryan Howard also adding base hits in the victory.

The Phillies bullpen also looked solid, with Shawn Camp, Phillippe Aumont and Kevin Munson each throwing scoreless innings in relief.
